Council pledges $5K for comprehensive plan

Funds to support Imagine One 85 initiative, Lilly grant application

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

At their regular monthly board meeting Wednesday, March 4, the North Manchester Town Council voted unanimously to pledge $5,000 towards the cost of the development of a comprehensive plan for Wabash County.

In a letter dated the same day from Adam Penrod, town manager for North Manchester, addressed to Brent Lee, program director for the Lilly Endowment, the town has committed to support the proposal submitted by the Community Foundation of Wabash County (CFWC) for the Gift VII Implementation Grant.

"Through this funding opportunity, the Community Foundation and its partner Grow Wabash County is undertaking a single, county-wide comprehensive plan with a shared vision and goals for the growth of the entire county," stated Penrod.

population loss and economic decline annually since 1979."

"After the population study, community development consultants Mark Becker and John Stafford charged Wabash County to address seven areas of growth," stated Penrod. "Fundamental among the recommendations was to produce a comprehensive plan that respects the county's five distinct towns and its council and commission, yet provides a meaningful and comprehensive county-wide plan for the future.

The objectives of the plan, include analyzing community trends, educating the community regarding a plan, identifying stakeholder roles, defining a shared vision for growth, imploring citizen engagement, identifying assets and strengths, innovating planning and guiding implementation.

"As partners in the work of reversing population loss and stimulating economic growth, the town of North Manchester supplies two representatives to serve as members of the Imagine One 85 plan steering committee and commits to the responsibilities of that chartered group – attending all meetings, being fully engaged and prepared, selecting a consultant, organizing our community's events, acting as point persons to the CFWC and the consultant, voting on matters before the committee and encouraging participation by our citizens," stated Penrod.

Before the vote was taken, Penrod said he wanted to emphasize that they weren't losing their autonomy, but working together as a county with a single vision.

"I think it could be something that could be used all giving direction to come together as one," he said.

Allen Miracle, town council president, said he wanted North Manchester to avoid

Penny French-Deal selected in Hoosier Women Artists Contest

Staff REPORT

Artwork by a local artist will soon be displayed at the Statehouse, according to a series of press releases.

Penny French-Deal of North Manchester was selected to have her artwork decorate the Statehouse as part of Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch and Treasurer Kelly Mitchell's Hoosier Women Artists initiative.

Forty-six pieces of art were chosen out of more than 112 entries this year.

"I'm impressed with Penny's works throughout the years of this contest," stated Rep. David Wolkins, R-Warsaw. "She consistently enters amazing pieces, and this year is no different as she perfectly captured the theme of celebrating women with the commemoration of the women's suffrage centennial anniversary."

"Wabash County provides much inspiration for French-Deal's works of art, but this year she focused on the 100th anniversary of the Indiana women's suffrage movement. French-Deal chose specific moments in history honoring women, from the march for equality to Amelia Earhart and her plane to recognizing the first woman in space with a depiction of the space shuttle, and finished with a woman judge in front of the American flag," stated the

Youth Center to feature live music, discuss addiction

Wabash County Subcommittee for Drug Prevention co-sponsoring event Friday

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

Live music will open an event focused on addiction, stated Liz Hobbs, director of the Access Youth Center (AYC), in response to a Plain Dealer request.

Blizz, a Christian rapper, opens the event with a sampling of his songs before being joined by members of the local addictions panel from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 13 at 74 W. Canal St.

"We are always looking for ways to partner and bring free, positive, programming to youth and families during our Second Friday event nights," stated Hobbs. "The two members of the addictions panel that will be joining us for this event have ATC connections and understand our mission in the community. We are excited to have Blizz join us on this same evening; bringing his energy and his ability to speak truth and hope through his music."

This will be a free program for youth and families and is being co-sponsored by the Wabash County Subcommittee for Drug Prevention.

"We will be joined by two local members of the Addictions Impact Panel, which is a group of individuals whose lives have been affected either by their own substance use or that of a loved one. (We are) providing a space for them to share

COVID-19 concern results in IDOC visitation restrictions

Total of eight facilities suspending availability

STAFF REPORT

While there are presently no known cases of COVID-19 among staff or offenders housed at Indiana Department of Correction (IDOC) facilities, visitation to certain prison facilities has been suspended indefinitely, according to a press release.

"The decision to suspend visitation is precautionary in nature and was made in the interest of the health and safety of IDOC staff and offenders," according to the release.

The following facilities have been affected:

■ Heritage Trail Correctional Facility, Hendricks

County.

■ Indiana State Prison, LaPorte County.

■ Indiana Women's Prison, Marion County.

■ LaPorte Juvenile Correctional Facility, LaPorte County.

■ Plainfield Correctional Facility, Hendricks County.

■ Reception Diagnostic Center, Hendricks County.

■ New Castle Correctional Facility, Henry County.

■ Westville Correctional Facility, LaPorte County.

"The above facilities were identified for temporary suspension of visitations Due to being near an urban area or location where a member of the public was identified as being infected by COVID-19," stated the release.

While in-person visitations have been suspended, approved friends and family members can still visit remotely by video. Video visits must be scheduled in advance and are limited to 20 minutes.

Before visiting an IDOC facility, friends and family members should visit the Indiana Department of Correction website and search the Find A Facility to locate specific prison facilities and see if visitor restrictions are in place.

Nashville artists help out on stage and off after tornadoes

By KRISTIN M. HALL
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Members of the Grammy-winning string band Old Crow Medicine Show put down their fiddles and banjos and picked up chainsaws last week after deadly tornadoes hit middle Tennessee. “When I am doing this relief work in north Nashville and east Nashville and Donelson, the guys in Old Crow got their chainsaws out,” said lead singer Ketch Secor on Monday night, nearly a week after the severe storms. “We love our concerts and our audience, but when this happens in our town, we’re out there leading the charge.” Nashville musicians banded together both in their community, but also on stage during a benefit concert Monday night called “To Nashville, With Love” featuring a dozen artists playing to raise money for relief efforts. Some of the musicians who performed don’t live in Tennessee full-time, but record there and have close connections. British singer-songwriter

Yola got to work immediately, helping organize the concert in less than a week. Performers included Old Crow Medicine Show, Sheryl Crow, Dan Auerbach, Jason Isbell, Soccer Mommy, Brothers Osborne and Ashley McBryde. The proceeds from Monday’s concert were going to the Community Foundation of Middle Tennessee. At least six tornadoes hit the state and killed 24 people. “That tornado whipped out a lot of precious things, a lot of mementos, a lot of things that signify a family life or a loved one,” said Yola backstage. “You need to put that love back in.” Many in the town’s musical community were impacted. Country star Dierks Bentley and his crew showed up in gloves and boots to help his drummer, Steve Misamore, whose home was severely damaged. Dualtone Records’ Nashville office was directly hit, as well as a popular club called The Basement East. Mike Grimes and Dave Brown, co-owners of The Basement East, said staff members were finishing their shifts early Tuesday morning after a Bernie Sanders fundraising concert when one person stepped outside and saw a funnel cloud approaching. The staff grabbed three pedestrians off the street and huddled in the basement as the tornado tore down the venue’s cinder-block walls and ripped off the roof. No one was hurt at The Basement East, but two people were killed as they were leaving a neighboring bar. But left standing among the rubble was one piece of wall that featured a mural that declared “I Believe in Nashville.” It was a slogan that became popular in Nashville after the devastating 2010 flooding that hit the city. Even amidst the debris, people have still been walking past roadblocks to take a picture of the mural that survived the winds. “It’s an amazing thing that it is still standing and very symbolic of the town’s resolve and resiliency,” said Brown.

Advocates say Indiana regulation limits threaten those who rent

By TOM DAVIES
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Opponents are warning that a Republican push to block Indiana cities from regulating rental properties threatens existing local protections for tenants and would tilt state law heavily in favor of landlords. The proposal remained under negotiations Tuesday by House and Senate members ahead of Wednesday’s expected adjournment of this year’s legislative session. The possible restrictions emerged two weeks ago as Republicans took up the limits backed by the Indiana Apartment Association as the Democratic-controlled Indianapolis City-County Council approved an ordinance that included allowing fines for landlords who retaliate against renters over living condition complaints. It also required landlords to give tenants information on their legal rights and responsibilities. GOP leaders and the apartment association argued that tenant-landlord regulations should be uniform statewide, but tenant advocates maintain the proposal would be unfair to the some 2 million Indiana residents living in rental housing. “It is a form of second-class citizenship that shouldn’t be acceptable,” said Mark Russell, director of education and family services for the Indianapolis Urban League. “This retaliation hurts citizens who are the most vulnerable. It occurs regularly, and it occurs without regulation.” The proposal, approved mostly along party lines in the House last week, would prohibit local regulations on any “aspects of the landlord-tenant relationship,” including the screening process for renters or requiring notification of tenants’ rights. That version also would limit tenants to receiving one month’s rent if a court finds that person was a victim of landlord retaliation, while landlords could be awarded attorney fees and damages if they win in court. Republican negotiators said they were working on revisions to better equalize how renters could be treated in court. “We felt like the balance was swung too far the wrong direction in the actions here in Marion County,” said GOP House Speaker Todd Huston, who assumed the top House position on Monday. “We want to find the right balance for statewide action. At the end of the day, we want people to make investments that have quality housing available.” Opponents say they’re worried the proposal would negate current local regulations, such as those on apartments in college towns, including Bloomington and West Lafayette. They also raise concerns about whether the proposal’s impact on local anti-discrimination ordinances in cities such as Indianapolis, Columbus and South Bend that go further than state law and include protections based on sexual orientation.

NTSB to meet on the cause of a crash that killed 3 siblings

ROCHESTER (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board will hold a meeting next month to determine the probable cause of the 2018 crash that killed three siblings crossing a rural northern Indiana highway to reach their stopped school bus, the agency announced Tuesday. The April 7 meeting in Washington, D.C., will investigate the Oct. 30, 2018, crash involving a pickup truck on two-lane Indiana 25 in Rochester. The crash killed 6-year-old twin brothers Xzavier and Mason

Ingle, and their 9-year-old sister, Alivia Stahl. A fourth child, Maverik Lowe, 11, suffered critical injuries. Alyssa Shepherd, 25, of Rochester was convicted in October of reckless homicide, criminal recklessness and passing a school bus, causing injury. Shepherd was sentenced to four years in prison, though she is appealing her convictions. Authorities have said the students were waiting for the bus on the opposite side of the road. The school bus’ red warning lights were active, and its stop arm was extended. After being signaled by the driver to cross, the four students entered the roadway and were struck by Shepherd’s pickup truck. At the time of her arrest, Shepherd told authorities she didn’t realize that she was approaching a stopped school bus, despite the activated stop arm and flashing lights. Court documents show Shepherd told police she saw the lights but didn’t recognize the vehicle as a school bus until the children were right in front of her.

Using correct terminology decreases confusion

DEAR DOCTOR: Would you please explain the terms we keep hearing in news reports about that new virus, like “epidemic” and “outbreak” and “pandemic”? It seems like they’re being used interchangeably, and it makes it hard to understand what’s really going on.

Elizabeth Ko & Eve Glazier
Ask the Doctors

DEAR READER: You are referring to what initially was known as Wuhan coronavirus, a new respiratory illness identified in China at the end of December 2019. The name referred to the city where the illness first appeared and the specific virus that causes it. In mid-February, the World Health Organization officially gave the virus a name – COVID-19. That breaks down to “CO” for corona, “VI” for virus, “D” for disease, and 19, which indicates the year this new illness appeared.

Your question is important because each of the terms you mention – outbreak, epidemic and pandemic – refers to a different type of event. They arise from a branch of medicine known as epidemiology, which is the study of how, where and why disease and illness spread, and how to predict and prevent them. And we agree that misusing these terms can lead to confusion and misunderstanding. An outbreak is a disease or condition that occurs in greater-than-expected numbers. The departure from the norm can include the time of year during which the increase in illness appears, the specific group of people it affects, the geographical area it covers or the type of illness itself. For example, polio has become so rare in the U.S. that just a handful of cases in one area would be considered an outbreak. At the other end of the spectrum is the influenza virus. We have become so accustomed to the annual surge in influenza infections that, rather than calling it an outbreak, it is often referred to simply as “flu season.” An outbreak that increases rapidly in both the number of new cases and in geographic scope is referred to as an epidemic. That’s what happened with COVID-19, which began as a localized outbreak in Wuhan and then spread throughout much of China. In this case, the epidemic was caused by a new strain of coronavirus that health officials believe “jumped” from animals to humans. When an epidemic spreads across the globe, it’s known as a pandemic. The numbers of people who become ill, as well as the fatality rate, is much higher in a pandemic. Unfortunately, some news reports are misusing the word when talking about COVID-19. While it’s true that the virus has spread to other nations, the numbers of cases outside of China remain quite low at this time and don’t meet the definition of a pandemic. A lot of people in the United States are worried about the new coronavirus, but the risk here is low. We agree with health officials who say that the greater health risk continues to come from our own ongoing influenza season. Respiratory viruses enter our bodies via the mucous membranes in the mouth, nose and eyes. So wash your hands often, don’t touch your face, and seek treatment and stay home if you’re sick. And remember, it’s still not too late for a flu shot. *Eve Glazier, M.D., MBA, is an internist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA Health. Powder spurs Indiana city hall evacuation

MUNCIE (AP) — Two women were taken into custody Tuesday after an unidentified white powder later found to pose no danger to humans was discovered in its city hall, prompting the building's evacuation.

Muncie Police Chief Nathan Sloan said police planned to question the women based on surveillance video that he said showed them throwing the powder inside the Muncie City Hall, the Star Press reported.

Sloan said the video captured the women throwing the powder around "with their bare hands." The substance was found in one of the building's elevators and on its second and third floors, police said.

"We're not real sure what their intentions were just yet.

NEW YORK — Last fall, the violent satire "The Hunt" became ensnared by some of the very politics it so playfully parodies.

Universal Pictures pulled "The Hunt" from release after a series of deadly shootings and wave of right-wing criticism, including from President Trump. He called it a movie "made in order to inflame and cause chaos."

Conservative commentators came out in force against it. Fox News' Dan Bongino declared that "the Hollywood hate machine appears to be taking its anti-Trump derangement syndrome to disturbing new levels."

Now, the makers of "The Hunt" want a do-over. And they feel they have a movie worthy of not a second chance but a legitimate first impression.

The latest from the low-budget, high-impact horror production company Blumhouse Productions, "The Hunt" isn't the liberal screed it was accused, sight unseen, of being. It's a heightened, bipartisan farce that puts the red-vs-blue vitriol of social media into a bloody action-movie blender.

The film, penned by Damon Lindelof ("Watchmen," "Lost") and Nick Cuse, is a loose take on "The Most Dangerous Game," in which wealthy liberals kidnap a dozen "rednecks" and "deplorables" to hunt on a private preserve. That may sound one-sided — its summary helped stoke the controversy — but "The Hunt" lampoons the left as much (if not more so) than the right.

It's an absurdist melee in which liberals smugly brag of a tweet liked by Ava DuVernay and shout "Climate change is real!" while hunting their prey, and conservatives blame "crisis actor" migrants and "godless elites." For anyone in the film spouting conspiracy theory or one-sided rhetoric, well, things don't end well.

"The Hunt" may have gone from the frying pan into the fire. It opens in theaters Friday just as coronavirus fears are spiking in the U.S. But its filmmakers are just happy "The Hunt" is seeing the light of day.

"It's coming out on Friday the 13th. It already is a zombie. It died and it is now back to life," says Lindelof, who's also a producer on the film. "I feel like it's a huge victory that it's just being released. Everything else is gravy."

Universal initially pulled ads for "The Hunt" last year after a pair of shootings on Aug. 3, one at a Walmart in El Paso, Texas, the other in downtown Dayton, Ohio. The timing wasn't right for a movie that conflated gun violence with sport. Once the movie became a target of political debate, the Sept. 27 release date was canceled. Jason Blum, founder and chief of Blumhouse and a producer on "The Hunt," says that decision was unanimous.

"But it was always the plan to bring it back," says Blum, who adds "not one frame, not one line" of the film has since been changed. "Everybody jumped to conclusions about what the movie was and nobody had seen the movie."

Still, the backlash caught the filmmakers off guard.

"I know this sounds ridiculous in hindsight, but I was genuinely surprised when what happened happened," says Lindelof. "I'm not someone who views myself as a provocateur. I knew that this movie was playing in quote-unquote 'dangerous' territory, but I didn't think that the movie was in and of itself dangerous or was advancing some sort of dangerous message."

Made for about $15 million, "The Hunt" was inspired in part by Jordan Peele's "Get Out." Lindelof and Cuse were jolted by its combination of social satire, thriller and horror. They endeavored to channel the extreme divisions of American politics — and their own liberal biases — into something that audiences from both sides of the aisle could laugh at.

"As a liberal myself, I feel like I have more license to make fun of myself and the people I spend time with because I know them better," says Lindelof. "One of our weak spots, as a broad generality, is that we don't have a great sense of humor about ourselves about certain things and we do tend to be too finger-waggy at points. So I took those things that I don't like about myself and made them the villain of the movie."

The movie's star is Betty Gilpin, who plays Crystal, one of the hunted. She's ex-military, largely disinterested in politics and, through grit and cunning, turns the table on her captors, ultimately facing off with the group's leader (Hilary Swank). In a bit of wry casting, the native New Yorker Gilpin ("GLOW") is playing a Southerner, and Swank, who's from Nebraska, plays a big city liberal.

It's a confident, star-making performance by Gilpin. "When the movie was canceled, that was the thing that I was most sad about," says Lindelof. "People aren't going to get to see what Betty did."

Universal has revamped the marketing for "The Hunt," making its satirical nature more evident and playing up the past controversy. Trailers call it "the most talked about movie of the year is one that no one's actually seen."

Parkview Wabash Foundation is sponsoring the event, along with a second open house from 5:30 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 13, 5:30 to 7 p.m., for people who are unable to attend on March 26. OUR TAKE

Be prepared for tornadoes as weather warms

Winter weather packed a punch in late February, but with the spring season approaching, there are other weather threats we should be prepared for.

Spring will officially begin on March 19, and with the warmer weather comes greater risks of tornadoes and severe thunderstorms.

Annually, Indiana sees on average 22 tornadoes per year, with an above-average count of 32 reported in 2019, according to the Department of Homeland Security.

Two very damaging tornadoes occurred across middle Tennessee during the early morning hours earlier this week, resulting in widespread damage and numerous injuries and fatalities, according to a National Weather Service preliminary damage survey.

During the month of March, Indiana sees one tornado on average, but as the spring months progress those numbers increase to an average of more than five tornadoes in May.

In May of last year multiple confirmed tornadoes destroyed and severely damaged homes and farm buildings in Miami and neighboring counties.

Here are some definitions and guidelines provided by The National Weather Service to follow to help keep you and your family safe:

Tornado Watch: issued when conditions are favorable for tornado development. People located in and around the watch area should keep an eye to the sky and listen to their NOAA weather radio all hazards or tune to local broadcast media for further weather information. The watch is intended to give you time to prepare and time to review your safety rules.

Tornado Warning: issued when a developing tornado has been detected by National Weather Service doppler radar or a reliable report of a tornado has been reported. A tornado warning is usually issued for portions of one or two counties, for an hour or less. The storm could also produce large hail and destructive straight line winds. If the tornado warning includes your neighborhood or work place, you should seek safe shelter immediately.

In the event of a tornado, here are some tornado safety rules to keep you and your family safe according to government reports:

In general, get as low as you can. A basement below ground level or the lowest floor of a building offers the greatest safety. Put as many walls between yourself and the outside as possible. Avoid windows.

Tornadoes could be obscured by rainfall or come at nighttime. Do not wait until you see or hear the tornado, it may be too late.

Do not waste time opening or closing windows and doors. It will not protect the structure. You will only waste time and put yourself and others in greater risk. Use those valuable seconds to find a place of safety.

In homes or public buildings: go to the basement or a small interior room, such as a closet, bathroom or an interior hall on the lowest level. Close all doors to the hallway for greater protection. If possible, get under something sturdy like a heavy table. Protect yourself from flying debris with pillows, heavy coats, blankets or quilts. Use bicycle or motorcycle helmets to protect your head.

In mobile homes: leave well in advance of the approaching severe weather and go to a strong building. If there is no shelter nearby, get into the nearest ditch, low spot or underground culvert. Lie flat, covering your head with your hands for protection.

In vehicles or outdoors: when tornadoes are possible, limit your outdoor plans or finish them early. Stay close to a sturdy shelter. If caught outside, find shelter in a ditch or remain in your vehicle and cover your head for protection. Do not take shelter under a highway overpass, where wind speeds can increase due to a tunneling effect. It is best to not put yourself or others in a situation where no sturdy shelter is available.

Remember, stay away from doors, windows, outside walls and protect your head.

We'll always have 'Hardball'

Few things in television happen suddenly, excluding breaking news. The headline that MSNBC's Chris Matthews announced last week – "I'm retiring" – was no exception.

His number was coming up long before a young journalist named him as the network anchor who had made her "uncomfortable" three years earlier when she appeared on his show.

Kathleen Parker

The young and restless pundit class has an entirely different code of workplace ethics than many of the old fogies running the shows. Exhibit A: Matthews – the dazzling, obnoxious, interrupting, heart-on-his-sleeve, pre-emptive, pontificating, passionate, personality-filled iconic, flirty, dragonslaying lover of all things political. At 74, this is a man from a different era.

Whatever one's opinion of the man, Matthews has been a lightning rod to anyone who watched or knew him during the 20-year run of "Hardball." To some, he was a loud-mouthed jerk who never let his guests finish a sentence. I once called him on this when I was the guest, and he retreated like a bad puppy. He could be humble when pressed.

To others he was the 7 p.m. place for politics, a destination program where everyone who was anyone showed up to play.

To still others, some of whom have called to warn me against defending him, he was an abusive misogynist who frequently made sexist, as well as sexually loaded, comments to female guests.

I come not to defend Chris but to balance the picture now unfolding and to offer a few comments on the so-called "cancel culture" that led to this moment.

Chris gets credit for bringing on stage a lot of people – myself included – who never had a chance to be on television. He lifted a lot of people out of obscurity that way. If we jokingly and publicly flirted it was because we shared a level playing field. And I have known him for 20 years, going back to when we were both columnists for the same syndicate.

The boyish Matthews may have thought that what he could say to one, he could say to another. Clearly, not. Absent that level playing field between equals, flirty banter between genders is freighted with the potential for misunderstanding and fear. There's no excuse for the things Matthews is accused of saying, not only by the GQ writer who named him last week but also by others with similar tales. Commenting on a female's appearance in a work environment, even if intended as a compliment, isn't, and was never, acceptable, as Matthews himself said in his farewell apology.

Fine and done. But more important than Matthews retiring from "Hardball" is the climate that made his departure necessary, at least from the corporate perspective. In the post-#MeToo era, the movement that has started to put an end to sexual harassment that ranges from sexual advances and intimidation to rape (Harvey Weinstein) has swept people like Matthews into its vortex of contempt and condemnation.

It is tempting once more to ask why so many television newsmen have been swept up in the #MeToo movement. The industry, even more than other lines of work, has long been fertile ground for harassment. So much of the medium is about appearances that many of the metrics are misplaced. On top of that, even on good days most normal humans would be uncomfortable on air. It's simply much more exposed and vulnerable than real life.

This course correction was essential given the abuses with which we're now all familiar, but now seems a good time to recognize that not all sins are created equal. One woman's compliment is another's sexual harassment. Clearly, the answer is to avoid making personal comments, but I worry this is leading us to stifle human interaction.

We're all mixed bags, some parts good and some bad. Feelings get hurt from time to time. A compliment may be unwelcome, but there are ways to circumnavigate spectacle and demands for retribution. Pressure from women's organizations demanding Matthews' exit is just the latest form of extortion exerted against corporations nervous about boycotts and, in this case, ratings.

A few years ago, Matthews was trying to thank me at a large gathering of colleagues but got flustered and ended up embarrassing me. I was uncomfortable, though probably not noticeably because there's no crying in baseball. Rather than write a column about it, though it might have boosted my Twitter followers, I wrote him a stinging email, which he answered three days later. He wrote: "A gentleman never insults someone by accident, and I did. I'm sorry."

It was worth the wait, and we moved on. Chris will, too. And I doubt we've heard the last from him. Of one thing we can be certain: Chris Matthews goes nowhere quietly, especially not in an election year.

HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 11, the 71st day of 2020. There are 295 days left in the year.

Highlight in history:

On March 11, 2011, a magnitude-9.0 earthquake and resulting tsunami struck Japan's northeastern coast, killing nearly 20,000 people and severely damaging the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power station.

On this date:

In 1862, during the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln removed Gen. George B. McClellan as general-in-chief of the Union armies, leaving him in command of the Army of the Potomac, a post McClellan also ended up losing.

In 1918, what are believed to be the first confirmed U.S. cases of a deadly global flu pandemic were reported among U.S. Army soldiers stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas; 46 would die. (The worldwide outbreak of influenza claimed an estimated 20 to 40 million lives.)

'Indiana Beach,' R.I.P.

Sorry, Hoosier tourists – you've just been given one more reason to cross a state line in search of that perfect day trip.

Indiana Beach, the amusement park operated on the shores of Lake Shafer in White County for nearly 100 years, has been shut down by its corporate owners in California.

When all the chin-scratching trend watchers speculate on reasons for the closing, a couple will probably stand out.

One is the indifference (or greed, some would say) of big business. The original, local owner sold the place to a New York outfit that apparently didn't do much before selling it to the Californians, who made some improvements but could still only eke "marginal profits" out of the place.

The other is the evolving nature of entertainment. People have so many ways to amuse themselves at home these days that the idea of fighting traffic and crowds just to stand in line somewhere isn't quite as attractive as it once was.

Both of those theories are quite reasonable, and I have reasons to appreciate each of them.

I spent most of my career at a newspaper that succumbed to the local-to-corporate disassembly line. Yes, it likely would have fallen to the digital revolution in any case, but I can't help but feel it ended up on blocks in the derelict front yard of old media sooner than it had to.

And heaven knows I spend enough time at my keyboard doing things that I once did by venturing "outside" (you remember it, I'm sure). I won't say my Amazon shopping killed Sears and L.S. Ayres, but you can probably blame me and my ilk for Kmart.

But, being one of those chin-scratching trend watchers myself, I naturally have to look for the bigger picture.

Which, I think, is this: As humans are fragile and life is brief, so are the expressions of our collective enterprise impermanent. We resist that fact with every fiber of our being, but it is true nonetheless.

Indiana Beach is but one of a list of disappearing Hoosier attractions. The most recent are the auctioning off of Amish Acres in northeast Indiana and the entire town of Story being put up for sale. But the list is long – the 100 Center shopping destination in Mishawaka, a Ferris wheel and roller coaster on the beach in Michigan City. Ogden Dunes had a 200-foot ski jump and Porter had a planetarium.

We can all add our own personal losses to the list of places generally missed.

Mine would include the restaurant where my family gathered in monthly, merry celebrations, lost to the last big recession; and my high school, sacrificed to the imperatives of racially balanced education. Oh, and of course, I remember a thriving urban center before malls sucked the life out of it. Who in Indiana doesn't remember a downtown that "isn't what it used to be"?

When we lament those losses – and we all do, each and every one of us – we are really yearning for the return of a past we can never recapture.

The stories about Indiana

Beach quote family after family talking about visits to the park being a tradition, sometimes going back generations, parents taking the children to the attractions their parents took them to. That history is what families feel slipping away – the amusement park is just a symbol of it.

Rescuing Indiana Beach or Amish Acres, which some entrepreneurs are hoping for, won't bring the nuclear family back into focus. Reviving my favorite restaurant won't reunite my family members now scattered in multiple cities in different states.

When I drive by my high school, which has a second life as an administrative center, I can feel the ghosts of my past. But those students in the yearbook I drag out occasionally – frozen in eternal youth – are still together only in my memory. We have all moved on.

That is what people do; we move on. And those who come after us have their own ideas about what to do with what we left behind.

That's what I want to tell city leaders desperately trying to recapture downtown's glory. People concentrated there for a reason, and they dispersed for a reason, too. Let the city move on. Let it grow and change and create new memories for the next generation.

That's what I want to tell them. But it would be pointless. They won't listen. They can't.

High school’s art project highlights refugee crisis

By BROOKE MCAFEE
News and Tribune

CLARKSVILLE — Through a recent art project, students at a local high school have worked one stitch at a time to raise awareness of the struggles faced by refugees across the world.

For months, the fine arts department at Our Lady of Providence High School in Clarksville has been involved in an international art initiative called 25 Million Stitches to bring attention to the global refugee crisis. The local project features hand-stitched work by Providence students and other community members, and the arts department recently set up panels for students to stitch on before the start of class. The panels will be mailed to California to become part of a tapestry featuring more than 2,000 artists.

The idea behind the art initiative is that each stitch represents an individual who has been forced to flee their country as a result of war, genocide, poverty, natural disasters, violence and other threats. According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, there were an estimated 25.9 million refugees worldwide in 2018, so the initiative aims to collect at least 25 million stitches to represent the scale of the refugee crisis.

When Donna Burden, art teacher at Providence, was informed of the 25 Million Stitches project, she was immediately inspired to work with her own students on the initiative. Students have worked on the panels in her 3-D art classes and the school’s art club, and she eventually opened up the project so that anybody could work on a panel.

The California artist behind the initiative mailed the fabric to the school, Burden said, and students started working on the panels in the fall. The school is preparing to mail off the panels, but before they say goodbye to their artwork, the panels will be exhibited from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday at Providence’s administrative corridor. The big art piece will be on display in California later this year.

Burden describes the project as “artful service.”

“It’s using your God-given skills and talents to benefit the community and the world around you – it’s doing good in the name of art, basically,” she said.

Burden said she didn’t know much about sewing or embroidery when she started the project – her skills extended to attaching a button or sewing a straight line on a sewing machine – so she was learning with the students throughout the project, and she often learned new stitches from her students. Few of the students had experience with sewing, she said.

All of the panels are hand-stitched so that artists can have a personal connection with each stitch, Burden said.

“You can kind of meditate on each life that you’re representing,” she said. “If you go through the sewing machine, you can go so fast that you don’t really have a connection with the stitches, and you want to connect with the stitches. The more stitches that you have, the more lives you are representing.”

Burden said about 100 students in her intro to 3-D class have worked on the project, and last month, students and faculty were invited to add stitches to panels representing the names of the high school’s “houses,” which include faith, courage, justice, humility, integrity, spirit, truth and loyalty. She hopes to reach school-wide participation in the project.

She let the students select their own themes for their design, but she asked them to keep their images positive. The imagery depicted in the panels includes animals, flowers, crosses, inspirational words and symbols of peace and unity. One of the panels depicts holding hands forming a heart with the words, “there is no ‘us’ and ‘them,’ there is only ‘us.’”

At the beginning of the project, the class had discussions on the topic of human dignity and the refugee crisis, Burden said.

“I think because we talked ahead of time about the dignity of life and how Christ calls us to help all people, they just kind of went into the planning with that in the forefront of their minds,” Burden said.

Providence senior Augusta Schonard’s panel depicts a crowd of people gathered outside the Berlin Wall with the words “we know walls don’t work,” and the piece contains a stitched peace sign as graffiti on the wall.

Schonard said she loves sewing, and it meant a lot for her to be an advocate for the acceptance of refugees through her panel. She wanted to comment on the Trump administration’s building of the border wall.

“Basically, the message I wanted to send was, we know that this doesn’t work, so why do this again?” she said. “And also to help the refugees, of course, and to let them into the country, because we know that they need help, and we should help them because, it’s just the good thing to do.”

The panel also references the Bible verse Leviticus 19:33, which instructs that when a foreigner “resides among you in your land, do not mistreat them,” but instead, to treat them “as your native-born.”

“(The verse) says we should not judge foreigners, for we were once foreigners in Egypt,” Schonard said.

Sophomore Kayla Badon was among the students contributing her stitches to the “house” panels this week. For her, the art project has personal significance – her father came to the United States as a refugee at age 15 in search of a better life, she said.

Southwood students participate in 2020 ISSMA contest

The competition took place Saturday, Feb. 8 at Huntington High School

STAFF REPORT

Southwood Jr-Sr High School students participated in the district vocal/piano solo and ensemble contest Saturday, Feb. 8 at Huntington High School in Huntington, according to a press release.

Thirteen junior high students and 16 high school students had 20 entries and brought home 19 first ratings and one second-place rating; six Group I entries advanced to the state contest which was Feb. 22 at Perry Meridian High School in Indianapolis.

Contest participants are entered according to the level of difficulty of their music; group levels I to V, I being the most difficult and V being the least difficult music. Group I music must be selected from a required list of music. Participants receive medals for first, second and third places only at each group level.

Only group I participants that receive a first rating advance to the state contest.

French-Deal’s artwork has been selected to hang in the Statehouse as part of the artist’s initiative four times now.
“My painting went with the theme this year of women’s suffrage but also celebrating the accomplishments of women,” stated French-Deal. “The thought process goes maybe a couple of weeks and then moves to some sketches. This painting was done wet on wet, so I had to finish rather quickly, within a couple of days.”
French-Deal and other artists were honored at a Statehouse ceremony Wednesday, March 4, as a part of Women’s History Month.

“It’s great to be selected this year,” stated French-Deal. “I haven’t entered every year, but it’s nice to have been here four times now. It’s energizing and exciting. To be here and doing this on this level is a wonderful experience.”
The Hoosier Women Artists Contest takes place each March to honor female artists for their skill as well as inspire others to pursue their talents. This year’s contest fell on the 100th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment, granting women the right to vote. In light of this important milestone in our nation’s history, artists were asked to submit pieces that reflect the celebration of women and commemoration of the women’s suffrage centennial anniversary.

“Congratulations to both artists for being selected as winners among a very competitive and talented pool of entries,” stated Zay. “Each year, I am amazed by the beautiful artwork submitted for the Hoosier Women Artist Contest, and Penny and Brenda certainly showcased how talented our community is.”

West Virginia delegate loses suit blaming bar for blindness

GARY (AP) — The Indiana Supreme Court has ruled against a lawsuit filed by a West Virginia delegate over a 2006 parking lot brawl that left him blinded years before he was elected to office.
The lawsuit said Cavanaugh’s Sports Bar & Eatery, near Gary, Indiana, had an obligation to protect its patrons inside the bar and outside, especially because fights were foreseeable.
The Supreme Court disagreed in a 3-2 vote last week, The Bluefield Daily Telegraph reported.
Del. Eric Porterfield was severely injured in a 3 a.m. fight in 2006 that began when his friend made a comment to a female patron as the bar was closing and the crowd was leaving. The friend wound up fighting with the woman’s boyfriend and others. Porterfield got involved and had his eyes gouged.

The lawsuit said the bar failed to take reasonable care for Porterfield’s safety, especially since five similar fights happened in the parking area in the last year.
The judgement summary said Cavanaugh couldn’t foresee a bar patron blinding another patron during a sudden fight. It said Porterfield and his friend were socializing at the bar with the bartenders and no customers showed animosity toward them and vice versa.
“Indeed, no evidence suggests any tension in the bar before the fight,” the summary said.
On Monday, Porterfield said he was disappointed with the decision.

the fate of similar towns which had fallen into ruin.
“My wife and I had the good fortune to take an Amtrak train from here to Denver last year and it was town after town you could tell that 30, 40 years ago or 50 years ago there were towns like ours that were probably thriving and doing well. And actually, we’re a lot better shape than a lot of those. It was amazing how many towns looked like they had pretty much died. I think it happened slowly and I think it happened kind of creeps up on us before we even know. We can’t guarantee this will change everything, but we hope that it produces a few first steps,” he said.

Virus scare leads Cent. Conn. St. to cancel baseball trip

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — Central Connecticut State will not travel to Omaha, Nebraska, to play a baseball series against Creighton because of concerns about the coronavirus.

Central Connecticut State's athletic department said Tuesday that team schedules were being adjusted in accordance with a directive from the CSCU System Office regarding out-of-state travel and on-campus gatherings of 100 or more people.

The state of Connecticut had four confirmed cases of COVID-19 as of Tuesday.

The virus has infected over 700 people in the U.S. and killed at least 27. Worldwide, nearly 120,000 have been infected and over 4,200 have died. For most people, the virus causes only mild or moderate symptoms such as fever and cough.

Creighton said the series has been canceled and that it would try to find replacement games for this weekend.

IUPUI women win Horizon for first NCAA trip

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Holly Hoopingarner scored 16 points on 4-of-5 shooting from 3-point range and IUPUI earned its first NCAA Tournament berth win a 51-37 win over Green Bay on Tuesday in the Horizon League championship game.

Green Bay, which was bidding for its 19th NCAA trip, did not score in the fourth quarter.

Two-time league Most Outstanding Player Macee Williams added 13 points and nine rebounds for the Jaguars (23-8), who were in their first conference title game since the 2017 Summit League tournament. Racel McLimore scored 10 points.

No player reached double figures for the Phoenix (19-13), who were playing in their 10th-straight title game and trying to win their 17th championship. They missed all 11 shots and had four turnovers in the fourth quarter

IUPUI, which split its season series but won the league by two games with a school-record 15 wins, scored the first eight points in a difficult first quarter for both teams. Green Bay didn't score until the 3:07 mark and the Jags didn't have a field goal for the final seven minutes, holding on for a 9-4 lead.

Daughtry, Vander Velden lead Apaches in record-breaking season

By JACOB RUDE
sports@wabashplaindealer.com

Though the Wabash boys' basketball season came to an end unceremoniously with a shocking loss in the sectional semi-final against Fort Wayne Canterbury, individually and as a team, the Apaches left an indelible mark on the program's history books.

First off, in the final game, Elijah Vander Velden became the program's all-time leading rebounder with 471 career boards. The senior big man averaged 8.9 rebounds per game in his final campaign, totaling 213 rebounds on the year. For his career, Vander Velden averaged 5.6 boards per game in 84 games with the varsity.

Vander Velden's best game of the season also featured his highest rebound total. In Wabash's regular season meeting against Southwood, Vander Velden finished with 23 rebounds as part of his triple-double performance that saw him score 16 points and swat 11 shots.

In the team's two Wabash County Tournament game, Vander Velden grabbed 33 combined rebounds to earn the Most Valuable Player award for the two-day tournament.

Trenton Daughtry, meanwhile, capped off his stellar career by ascending to the top of the school and county's all-time scoring leaderboards. While the guard's scoring average dipped to 14.8 points per game, nearly four points less per game from his junior campaign, Daughtry still finished his career with 1,453 points.

That mark ranks him second all-time in program history in scoring, trailing only Marc Slaton's 1,575 points. Daughtry finished fourth all-time in boys' basketball scoring in Wabash County, finishing just two points behind Andy Holderman of Manchester's 1,455 points. Slaton is second all-time and Southwood's Carson Blair is first with 1,687 points.

Big Ten takes bruising battles to conference tournament

By MICHAEL MAROT
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Michigan State coach Tom Izzo thought he had seen everything during his 25-year tenure.

Then came this season, in which three teams with six Big Ten losses shared the league's regular-season crown and as many as 11 remain hopeful of making the NCAA Tournament's 68-team field.

Izzo doesn't expect things to get any easier over the next five days at the Big Ten Tournament.

"It's been the most difficult (season) in my 25 years," Izzo said. "There's so many teams that can win it, I think it will be probably the most exciting tournament since they started this thing."

No. 18 Wisconsin (21-10) won its last eight to take the top seed. The second-seeded Spartans (22-9), winners of five straight and ranked No. 9, find themselves in ideal position. Of the 22 previous tourney champs, 16 were seeded either first or second.

Just how good is the Big Ten?

Last week, eight teams appeared in the Top 25. Ten are projected to make the NCAA tourney. And the top seven spots and nine of the top 12 in strength of schedule are occupied by Big Ten schools, according to ESPN.

"It feels good to get a share of the title in the best conference I've ever coached in," said Mark Turgeon, coach of No. 12 Maryland (24-7). "Day in, day out, it was difficult."

Wisconsin, Michigan State, the third-seeded Terrapins (24-7) and No. 21 Illinois (21-10), the No. 4 seed, will have a slightly easier path to the tourney title after earning double byes into Friday's quarterfinals.

But with so many teams playing for such high stakes, it should be wide open — and worth watching.

"I think for fans and for those that love the game, media that cover it and fans of all the teams, it's going to be an electric tournament," said Chris Holtmann, coach of No. 19 Ohio State (21-10), the No. 7 seed.

ALL OR NOTHING?

Tenth-seeded Purdue (16-15) could have the most at stake in Indy.

The Boilermakers are No. 33 in the NET rankings, are No. 3 in strength of schedule by some rankings and have double-digit wins over No. 17 Virginia and Michigan State, plus a sweep of No. 25 Iowa. Still, coach Matt Painter isn't sure his team has done enough yet to count on a March Madness berth. "I think if we would have won a game or two, I'd say we'd be right there," Painter said. "I'd say losing our last game with the amount of losses we have, we probably have to win four games to get into the tournament."

Purdue faces Ohio State on Thursday.

NEW CONTENDERS

Sixth-seeded Penn State and eighth-seeded Rutgers enter this year's tournament in new roles — legitimate contenders.

The Nittany Lions are chasing only their second semifinal appearance since 2012. Rutgers has never been past the quarterfinals. To achieve those goals, though, coaches Patrick Chambers and Steve Pikiell know what must be done.

"We looked mentally and physically weary down the stretch," Chambers said of his Nittany Lions. "We need to get back to the way we were playing, fast."

Pikiell made it even simpler: "We have to play really well here, we can't reinvent the wheel."

Rutgers opens play Thursday against ninth-seeded Michigan (19-12) while the Nittany Lions (21-10) play either Nebraska (7-24) or Indiana (19-12).

FRONT AND CENTER

In a league known for its physical style, three big men should shine under the bright lights: Luka Garza of Iowa, Daniel Oturu of Minnesota and Jalen Smith of Maryland.

Garza, the Big Ten player of the year, fell just short of averaging a double-double with the Hawkeyes, averaging a league-best 23.9 points and 9.8 rebounds.

"It's just a never ending pursuit of excellence that you just don't often see and there never seems to be any stop in his desire to be better," said Fran McCaffery, coach of the fifth-seeded Hawkeyes.

In any other year, Oturu might have been player of the year. He finished second to Garza in scoring (20.0) and led the league in rebounding (11.4), earning second-team all-conference honors.

"He's been very, very productive," Minnesota

Texas player has concern about MLB opening day in Seattle

By JAKE SEINER
Associated Press

SURPRISE, Ariz. — With just over two weeks until baseball's opening day, Texas Rangers catcher Robinson Chirinos says he's "a little bit" concerned about traveling to Seattle with Washington state having the worst coronavirus outbreak in the U.S.

Washington Gov. Jay Inslee said Tuesday the state is preparing for potentially tens of thousands of cases, based on estimates of the spread of the disease. The Mariners are scheduled to open their season by hosting the Rangers on March 26. Major League Baseball said Monday that all opening weekend series were still set to run as planned.

"I know the season starts in Seattle, and we know how Seattle is right now," Chirinos said Tuesday. "That's 2½ weeks from now, so I think we're going to hear some news when we're getting close to opening day. Right now, it's starting the season in Seattle and see what happens in 2½ weeks."

Rangers president of baseball operations Jon Daniels said Monday that Texas, Seattle and MLB had not discussed opening day alternatives, which could include relocating the series to the Rangers' new ballpark in Arlington. Daniels said the stadium would be ready to host the series, if necessary.

For most people, the new coronavirus causes only mild or moderate symptoms, such as fever and cough. For some, especially older adults and people with existing health problems, it can cause more severe illness, including pneumonia.

The vast majority of people recover from the new virus. According to the WHO, people with mild illness recover in about two weeks. Those with more severe illness may take three to six weeks to recover. In mainland China, where the virus first exploded, more than 80,000 people have been diagnosed and more than 63,000 so far have recovered.

The NBA, NHL, MLS and MLB have yet to bar fans from stadiums in the U.S., but such measures have become common elsewhere. All upcoming professional soccer games in Spain, France and Portugal, as well as some in Germany and a European Championship qualifying match in Slovakia, will be played in empty stadiums because of the outbreak.

The Spanish league said Tuesday that matches in the first and second divisions will be played without fans for at least two weeks. The announcement came after the government outlined a series of preventative measures being implemented to help contain the spread of the virus, including ordering all sporting events with a significant number of fans — professional and non-professional — to be played in empty venues.

The league said it will "follow its recommendations and/or decisions, prioritizing the health of fans, players, club employees, journalists, etc., due to the COVID-19 health crisis."

Portugal announced similar measures for the professional league and said youth soccer competitions would be suspended between

Brady uncertainty overshadows other free agency options

By BARRY WILNER
AP Pro Football Writer

It probably makes sense when a six-time Super Bowl champion, and a quarterback to boot, enters free agency that his every move overshadows the rest of the available players. It does get nonsensical, of course, when Tom Brady saying he's headed on a family vacation draws headlines and massive social media reaction. Hey, folks, virtually every NFL player goes on holiday in the offseason. You can bet a few of the other free agents in this crop are doing so right now.

Naturally, Brady's situation is the most intriguing of them all. Perhaps even more so than Peyton Manning's when he became free from the Colts in 2013.

The bond between Brady and New England Patriots owner Robert Kraft has been strong. Remember that Kraft defended his QB and basically opposed all his fellow owners during the deflated footballs saga that followed the 2014 AFC title game. Minus a salary cap, Kraft would favor paying any number Brady mentioned. Even with the cap, New England has almost $44 million of room.

Brady's loyalty to his coach seems to have come into question, not just since New England's season ended in the wild-card round, but in previous years. So maybe moving on — and proving that he has been the main catalyst in the Patriots' championship run — is very enticing to Brady.

Also consider the finances if the Patriots don't sign him before free agency begins March 18. There's the possibility the team would need to pay a substantial "penalty," under collective bargaining rules, that would cut deeply into its salary cap room. Should Brady command a $30 million salary for 2020 in a new contract, plus that penalty money, the cap hit would be humongous.

As for landing spots should the most successful quarterback of our time — and pretty much league history — walk away from Foxborough, there are plenty. Yep, even for a QB who will turn 43 in August; more teams have been speculated in the competition, should it exist, than not involved.

Indeed, about the only teams not mentioned as possible suitors are the Kansas City Chiefs (Patrick Mahomes), Baltimore Ravens (Lamar Jackson), Seattle Seahawks (Russell Wilson), Green Bay Packers (Aaron Rodgers), Philadelphia Eagles (Carson Wentz) and New Orleans Saints (they aren't dropping Drew Brees for Brady).

There even are the wild projections of San Francisco as the 49ers get turned off of Jimmy Garoppolo — who led them to the Super Bowl last season — or the Texans, who have Deshaun Watson; Brady does had a history of winning with Houston coach Bill O'Brien. Meanwhile, a bevy of other standouts are on the market, not to mention a load of quarterbacks with plenty of starting experience (and some success).

The QB market features

Philip Rivers, Jameis Winston, Andy Dalton, Teddy Bridgewater, Dak Prescott, Ryan Tannehill and Marcus Mariota. Many of their moves could depend on where Brady winds up. There already are betting odds available not only on where Brady plays in 2020 but which quarterback would land in New England if Brady leaves.

Meanwhile, the QB carousel is obscuring the horizon. If you can look beyond the passers, there are some playmakers who could have a major impact wherever they go.

Seattle edge rusher Jadeveon Clowney has to whet appetites in cities where a sackmaster is a desperate need. Clowney, who was dealt from Houston to Seattle last year and played well when healthy for the Seahawks, hardly is the only disrupter on defense who is available. Chris Jones helped the Chiefs win the Super Bowl. Tampa Bay's Shaq Barrett is a consistent pass rush threat who also can play the run. Justin Simmons and Byron Jones are more than reliable defensive backs.

The upcoming draft is so deep in receivers that free agents at that position such as Amari Cooper and Emmanuel Sanders might not find the price they seek. But running back isn't nearly as loaded for the draft, and with his performance last season — particularly in leading the Titans to the AFC title game — Derrick Henry should be at the top of many lists if Tennessee doesn't franchise him.

300-pound forward Brant Banks, an offensive lineman.

The moves come after coach Fred Hoiberg announced two suspended players — guards Cam Mack and Dachon Burke Jr. — would not travel to Indy.

"The way I look at it right now," Hoiberg said, "is we have to make decisions that are in the best interest in our program."

the Three Rivers Conference and regular season finale, this season's Apaches became the first team in the program's history to finish conference play unbeaten.

Wabash finished with 19-5 mark after amassing a 21-5 record last season for a combined 40 wins in the last two seasons. From 2013 until 2018, Wabash totaled just 41 ones and had one winning season across five seasons.

esizing that it will be canceled or postponed."

The NBA told teams last week to prepare for the possibility of playing games in empty arenas, which Los Angeles Lakers star LeBron James initially said he wanted no part of and would not play. He said Tuesday at shootaround, however, that he would do whatever the NBA tells teams to do.

"It's funny because when I was asked the question (Friday) of, 'Would you play without no fans?', I had no idea it was actually a conversation going on behind closed doors about the particular virus," he said. "Obviously I would be very disappointed not having the fans, because that's what I play for. I play for my family, I play for my fans."

"They're saying no one could actually come to the game if they decide to go to that point, so I would be disappointed in that, but at the same time you've got to listen to the people that's keeping a track on what's going on, and if they feel like it's best for the safety of the players, the safety of the franchise, the safety of the league to mandate that, then we'll all listen to it."

Saturday and March 28. It also said non-professional soccer matches can't be played with crowds bigger than 5,000 people.

Later Tuesday, the French soccer league announced that all soccer matches in its top two divisions will be played without fans until April 15.

The moves came a day after Italy said all sports events in the country, including Serie A soccer games and preparatory events for the Tokyo Olympics, would be suspended until April 3.

Champions League matches are also being affected, including next week's game between Barcelona and Napoli in Spain and Bayern Munich's match against Chelsea in Germany. Both games will be played without fans in attendance.

In Germany, the Bundesliga said six out of nine games this week will be played without fans, starting with Borussia Mönchengladbach against Cologne on Wednesday and including one of Germany's biggest rivalries, Borussia Dortmund against Schalke

Man gets angry when wife resists catering to his libido

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 30 years. I still work full time, and my husband is now retired. We have had issues during most of our marriage, mainly concerning his not getting enough sex. A couple of times a week isn't sufficient.

Dear Abby

In the past, he looked at porn a lot. He likes to take pictures of me that he stores on his phone, wants me to wear seductive clothing when we go out and demands that I send him naked pictures of myself from work. It makes me very uncomfortable, but he gets angry when I don't play his game. He tells me often that I am no fun. When he gets angry, he says I am not sexy enough, too fat, not smart enough, etc. Yes, we have gone to marriage counseling in the past, and I have gone to counseling alone.

I've tried to learn to cope with living with him because I really don't want to divorce and destroy our family unit. We have three grown children, and in the past he bullied our only son for not being the best sports player he could be, even though he excelled.

I would like to retire soon, but now I wonder if he expects me to be his entertainment once I do. He has no hobbies. Do you have any advice? — Plaything In Texas

DEAR PLAYTHING: I am amazed you were willing to tolerate your husband's criticism and abuse for the length of time you have. Not once in your letter did you mention a single positive trait in the man. You wish to keep together a family that your husband has eroded.

My first tidbit of advice is this: Go back to counseling! If you actually plan to live out your life this way, you will need every ounce of support you can pay for. My second tidbit would be to talk to a lawyer. You may want to keep the family unit intact, but the price seems exorbitant to me.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very close friend, "Sandy." Sandy and I talk about everything. She suffers from bi-polar disorder, which, for the most part, is controlled. However, she has hit a downswing.

A few months ago, she volunteered to start babysitting my child, one evening a week for a few hours. Sandy has never had the first complaint about my child or her behavior. Recently, she came over for a visit and unloaded on me. She said she finds my child annoying, that my child has a problem listening and constantly interrupts and complains. I was completely taken aback. Abby, I have never received complaints about my child's behavior, and over the course of the months, Sandy never indicated that something was wrong.

I have been a great friend to her, always welcoming her in my home and helping however I can. I don't know what to do. I am hurt and angry. I feel like she just barged in and insulted my kid. I'm no longer sure I want to remain close to her because of this. Is this characteristic of bi-polar disorder? How do I express my feelings to her without risking having her fly off the handle? Please help! — Harsh Words In The South

DEAR HARSH WORDS: Not having met your child, I am not going to weigh in on whether what Sandy said was a slight. She may have been conveying something she thought you needed to know. That said, because Sandy finds your child annoying, she should no longer babysit for you. All children interrupt at one point or another. They don't always behave perfectly. I hope you won't take what Sandy told you as an insult worthy of ending a longtime friendship over, particularly knowing the woman has mood swings and has been cycling down.

Only the Holy Spirit can give us peace

From the writings of the Rev. Billy Graham

Q: My friends have recently been stripped of their wealth and prestige because of bad decisions they've made. They say they feel completely alone in the world. How can I help them realize God's love? — C.L.

A: Those who focus all attention on financial gain, business and social prestige — any affection on the wrong thing or person — often experience devastating loneliness when such things are taken away. Individuals can be stripped of worldly power and possessions from which they found their only meaning to life. In that moment, the Holy Spirit may cause the spiritual bandages to fall from their eyes helping them to see clearly for the first time their greater need. God is the only source of real power and the only enduring fountainhead of love and companionship.

People respond differently to these crises depending on temperament, emotional balance, environment and lifestyle. But regardless, it is a jolt in life. When former values have been swept away, when great disappointment has been experienced, when one has lost the sense of power through material possessions, feeling alone is common.

The most important thing anyone can do for those in despair is to point them to the Lord Jesus Christ. Only the Holy Spirit can give us peace in the midst of the storms of restlessness and despair. Often when people come to the end of themselves — and doing life their way — are they ready to hear God's Word. The very goodness of God leads people to repentance and salvation from the One who owns everything and possesses all power in Heaven and on earth. God calls His people to be faithful in pointing others to Him. This is the only way to eternal joy and happiness.

NOTICE OF REAL PROPERTY
COMMISSIONERS' CERTIFICATE SALE
Wabash County Indiana
Beginning 10:00 AM, April 14, 2020 Local Time

STATE OF INDIANA
WABASH COUNTY
Pursuant to the laws of the Indiana General Assembly and by resolution of the Wabash County Commissioners, notice is hereby given that the following described tracts or items of real property are listed for sale for delinquent taxes and / or special assessments. The minimum sale prices listed below are less than the minimum sale prices when offered in the immediately preceding county tax sale held under Section 5 of IC 6-1.1-24 and include all fees and expenses of the county directly attributable to the Commissioners' Certificate Sale. The Wabash County Commissioners will accept bids for the certificates of sale, for the price referred to in IC 6-1.1-24-6.1(a)(3), by public auction on April 14, 2020 at 10:00 AM Courthouse Time at the Courthouse - Commissioners' Room, 2nd Floor. Pursuant to IC 6-1.1-24-5.1, a business entity that seeks to register to bid in an Indiana Commissioners' Certificate Sale must provide to the county treasurer, a Certificate of Authority from, or proof of registration with the Secretary of State. Pursuant to IC 6-1.1-24-3(e), property descriptions may be omitted for properties appearing on the certified list in consecutive years. A complete property list may be obtained at www.sriservices.com or in an alternative form upon request. A person redeeming each tract or item of real property after the sale of the certificate must pay: (A) the amount of the minimum bid under Section 5 of IC 6-1.1-24 for which the tract or item of real property was last offered for sale; (B) ten percent (10%) of the amount for which the certificate is sold; (C) the attorney's fees and costs of giving notice under IC 6-1.1-25-4.5; (D) the costs of a title search or of examining and updating the abstract of title for the tract or item of real property; (E) all taxes and special assessments on the tract or item of real property paid by the purchaser after the sale of the certificate plus interest at the rate of ten percent (10%) per annum on the amount of taxes and special assessments paid by the purchaser on the redeemed property; and (F), all costs of sale, advertising costs, and other expenses of the county directly attributable to the sale of the certificate. If the certificate is sold for an amount more than the minimum bid under Section 5 of IC 6-1.1-24 for which the tract or item of real property was last offered for sale and the property is not redeemed, the owner of record of the tract or item of real property who is divested of ownership at the time the tax deed is issued may have a right to the tax sale surplus. Indiana law prohibits a person who owes delinquent taxes, special assessments, penalties, interest, or costs directly attributable to a prior tax sale, from purchasing tracts or items of real property at a tax sale. Prior to bidding at a tax sale, each bidder must affirm under the penalties for perjury that he or she does not owe delinquent taxes, special assessments, penalties, interest, costs directly attributable to a prior tax sale, amounts from a final adjudication in favor of a political subdivision in this county, any civil penalties imposed for the violation of a building code or ordinance of this county, or any civil penalties imposed by a health department in this county. Further, each bidder must acknowledge that any successful bid made in violation of the above statement is subject to forfeiture. In the event of forfeiture, the bid amount shall be applied to the delinquent taxes, special assessments, penalties, interest, costs, judgments, or civil penalties of the ineligible bidder, and a certificate will be issued to the county executive. The Commissioners specifically reserve the right to withhold from the sale any parcel which has been listed in error, or which otherwise becomes ineligible for sale either prior to the start or during the duration of the auction. The Auditor's Office does not warrant the accuracy of the key numbers or street addresses published herein and any misstatement in the key number or street address does not invalidate an otherwise valid sale.

STATE OF INDIANA IN THE WABASH CIRCUIT COURT SS: COUNTY OF WABASH
CAUSE NUMBER: 85C01-2001-JT-000001 IN THE MATTER OF THE TERMINATION OF THE PARENT-CHILD RELATIONSHIP: ILL - DOB 3/13/2012 SUMMONS FOR SERVICE BY PUBLICATION & AND NOTICE OF TERMINATION OF PARENTAL ALLEN LEROY LEE (FATHER)
DAWN LEE (MOTHER)
RIGHTS HEARING
TO: Dawn Lee
Whereabouts unknown
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the above noted parent whose whereabouts are unknown, that the Indiana Department of Child Services has filed a Petition for Involuntary Termination of your Parental Rights, and that an adjudication hearing has been scheduled with the Court.
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear before the Judge of the Wabash Circuit Court, 49 West Hill Street, Wabash, IN 46992 - 260-563-0661 for a(n) Initial/Fact Finding Hearing on 4/21/2020 at 9:00 AM and to answer the Petition for Termination of your Parental Rights of said child.
You are further notified that if the allegations in said petition are true, and/or if you fail to appear at the hearing, the Juvenile Court may terminate your parent-child relationship; and if the Court terminates your parent-child relationship you will lose all parental rights, powers, privileges, immunities, duties and obligations including any rights to custody, control, visitation, or support in said child; and if the Court terminates your parent-child relationship, it will be permanently terminated, and thereafter you may not contest an adoption or other placement of said child.
You are entitled to representation by an attorney, provided by the State if applicable, throughout these proceedings to terminate the parent-child relationship.
YOU MUST RESPOND by appearing in person or by an attorney within thirty (30) days after the last publication of this notice, and in the event you fail to do so, adjudication on said petition and termination of your parental rights may be entered against you, in your absence, without further notice. 3/3/2020 Clerk
